All of the apostrophes have fallen out of this piece of text! Can you help to put them back in? Circle the words which need apostrophes in the text below.

It was Abby Alligators birthday. "I will have a party," she thought "and invite all of my friends." She used her mums computer to make some invitations, and after she had written everyones addresses on the envelopes she took them to the post-office. George Giraffe was very excited when he saw his invitation in the postmans bag. Later that day he met Sam Snake at the doctors office. "Hello Sam! Are you going to the party?" George asked, when he saw Sams invitation. "No," Sam said, glumly. "I have to go to my aunts house that day."

On the morning of the party Abby went to the hairdressers salon, and borrowed her sisters best dress to wear. Max the monkey was the first to arrive and came in his dads new car. "Happy birthday!" said Maxs Dad, as he drove off, honking the cars horn.

After the guests had all arrived, they played some party games and then it was time for Abby to cut her birthday cake. The cakes icing was yellow, which was Abbys favourite colour, and it was so big that when it was put on the table, the tables legs nearly broke! After everyone had finished their cake, Abby opened her presents and then it was time for her friends to go home.

Now re-write all the words that you have circled, adding the apostrophe in the correct place.
