

Peter and Sally, two excited, clever year sixes, were on their first residential trip — in Wales. Peter was an extremely bright boy for his age because he always listened to adults (even though sometimes he did not agree with them). He was top in his class in every subject, geography and science were his favourite subjects. Peter so badly wanted to become an adventurer when he grew up, he dreamt of exploring the world. His idol was David Attenborough, the world-famous broadcaster and natural historian. Peter's walking partner was Sally, who, although being clever, was unfortunately, naturally clumsy.

The class set off into the forest to investigate the fauna and flora (animals and plants).
